

Conservation and Sustainability in Historic Cities

DENNIS RODWELL

Conservation and Sustainability in Historic Cities examines how the two key issues of urban conservation and sustainability relate to each other in the context of historic cities, and how they can be brought together in a common philosophy and practice that is mutually supportive. It sets out the theoretical and practical background to architectural conservation and how its perceived relevance and level of attainment can be extended when harnessed to wider agendas of sustainability and cultural identity. It tests the achievement of urban conservation through examples from across Europe and further afield and relates them to the sustainability agenda.

Understanding Historic Building Conservation

Edited by Michael Forsyth

This book describes the challenges of conservation at planning level in urban, rural and brownfield contexts, and the framework of legislation and charters within which these operate. It then discusses conservation philosophy and the importance of understanding the history of a building before making strategic decisions, and examines the vital role of each conservation team member. The book provides guidance on creating a conservation plan, and explains the basic issues of costings and contracts for conservation.

Building Pathology Second Edition

David Watt

'informative, well researched and readable'
Chartered Surveyor Monthly

Building pathology provides an interdisciplinary approach to the study of defects and performance in order to develop appropriate remedial and management solutions. It considers how the structure and materials of a building relate to its environment, its occupants and the way the building is used, so as to develop a better understanding of building failures.

This second edition has been updated to reflect changes in legislation, guidance and construction, and provides new case studies that demonstrate the breadth and depth of the subject.
