Purdue used this play yesterday vs Ohio State. The play begins with #5 setting a high ball screen for the point guard. This play allows for an abundance of options all of which depend up where the defense is playing in the post. Once #1 comes off the ball screen he has the option to hit #4 in the post. Assuming this isnt open, #4 can either set another ball screen for #1, set a back screen for #3 or completely clear out. Once the initial high ball screen is set, #4 makes the decision to stay home or clear out assuming #1 is beating his defender off the dribble.
